Kim Allain BScN RN MHS CIC-As the Provincial Infection Control Consultant within the Health System Quality branch at the Nova Scotia Department of Health & Wellness, Kim’s primary role is to enhance coordination, integration and consistency in infection prevention and control (IP&C) practice across health care provider organizations. This includes the facilitation and capacity building, development of best practice documents, educational support and the monitoring, measuring and evaluating of IP&C practices and indicator data. Kim is a graduate from the Dalhousie University School of Nursing, and holds a Masters in Health Studies. As a registered nurse for 20 years, Kim has worked in a variety of roles. Her career in infection prevention and control began in 2002 and she been board-certified in infection control and epidemiology (CIC designation) since 2005.